

NJMR Article Prize winners

In 2020, the NJMR Article Prize for the best article was given to Arnfinn Midtbøen's article, a well-grounded and timely academic contribution, as it documents and critically contributes to the dual citizenship literature:

Midtbøen, A.H. (2019). Dual Citizenship in an Era of Securitisation: The Case of Denmark. Nordic Journal of Migration Research, 9(3), 293–309. DOI: <http://doi.org/10.2478/njmr-2019-0014>

2018

In 2018, the NJMR article prize was given to two articles that both in different ways take home as their analytical starting point and use visual data in an innovating and engaging fashion.

NJMR Article Prize for the best article:

Andersen, D. J., & Pedersen, R. E. (2018). Practicing Home in the Foreign: The Multiple Homing Practices of Artisan Journeymen on the Tramp. Nordic Journal of Migration Research, 8(2), 82–90. DOI: <http://doi.org/10.1515/njmr-2018-0003>

Leivestad, H. (2017). Campsite Migrants: British Caravanners and Homemaking in Benidorm, Nordic Journal of Migration Research, 7(3), 181–188. DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1515/njmr-2017-0022>

2016

NJMR Article Prize for the best article was given to Camilla Nordberg's article as it draws on an eloquently conducted ethnographic study, is conceptually rich, and contributes to theories of citizenship by developing the notion of citizenisation as a process:

Nordberg, C. (2015). Invisibilised Visions: Migrant Mothers and the Reordering of Citizenship in a Nordic Welfare State Context, Nordic Journal of Migration Research, 5(2), 67–74. DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1515/njmr-2015-0011>

An NJMR special mention was given to Alinia & Eliassi's article:

Alinia, M., & Eliassi, B. (2014). Temporal and Generational Impact on Identity, Home(Land) and Politics of Belonging Among the Kurdish Diaspora, Nordic Journal of Migration Research, 4(2), 73–81. DOI: <https://doi.org/10.2478/njmr-2014-0008>
